A FOOTBALL COMEDY

PUT SOME TAPE ON IT

Everybody calls him a loser.
He keeps showing up.

Created by Dave C.

His shot at the pros

When an elderly stranger’s will gives a lifelong losing college football coach control of a pro team, he takes motivational clichés literally, from facing actual bulls to parachuting out of airplanes, to turn 53 clashing egos into a team and prove he can finally win.

He has to finish 8–8 to keep the job.

Coach Fontaine

Equal parts philosopher, con man and father figure.

Seven losing college seasons have failed to break his belief. He pushes his players past their limits, then fights just as hard for them off the field.

His assistant keeps him going. A sick child shows us why he cares.

The comedy comes from his methods

THE CLICHÉ

“Work as a unit”

The offensive line faces a charging 2,000-pound bull.

THE CLICHÉ

“Commit to the team”

Means parachuting out of an airplane.

THE CLICHÉ

“Heart of a lion”

Becomes a fake transfer machine and a blast of ice water.

The Las Vegas Bandits

53 clashing egos have to trust one another.

THE QUARTERBACK

A spaceship living room.
A real team to lead.

NIGHT TRAIN

Fierce loyalty and a need for more heart.

BIG SLOPPY

420 pounds of raw talent and questionable motivation.

A season to prove himself

8–8

For this coach, 8–8 means everything.

A brutal training camp builds toward one final drive. Two seconds remain. Fontaine calls the drop-kick play.

Audience & tone

For football fans who love underdog stories and outrageous ensemble comedy.

Major League meets Ted Lasso

Physical, profane comedy with a coach you can root for.

Concept trailer & screenplay

38-second AI concept trailer

Put Some Tape on It, by Dave C.

Watch the trailer and view the pitch:

PutSomeTapeOnIt.com

U.S. Copyright Reg. #TXu002501874 · WGA Reg. #2361818

Screenplay available

Dave C.

Writer / Creator

SeaRock Solutions LLC

seacorpdc@gmail.com

Completed book manuscript available
189 additional scenes
in written and audio formats